Identity: The New Four-Letter Word

Monica Bennett pulls back the curtain, ignoring the message of the feeble old man to pay no attention to him. For one-thousand years, the old man has orchestrated the identity changes of both autochthonous and heterochthonous nations. In addition to national identity changes, he has successfully changed land names and land location, in other words land locations are not where we are told they are.

What the old man didn't anticipate; is that the yellow brick road that paved over information, has become the information superhighway.

Monica takes an academic approach using modern scholastic sources and ancient biblical narratives to identify nationals, their land inheritance, and their connection to modern-day people.

Are you ready to hear the truth? Or, does it speak to you like a four-letter word?

Information presented in this presentation is by no means exhaustive. However, the selection, organization, and presentation of the materials will be enough for you to draw an insightful conclusion and inspire you to begin your own journey of discovery.

Ourstorian: The Art of Research

Monica Bennett is a self-styled Ourstorian. Her definition of an Ourstorian was published in the Urban Dictionary in 2018, and it read; “An Ourstorian is one who researches chronological records of events or pattern of behaviors relating to one’s own nation or tribe and then writes about it and shares the findings.”

She has discovered that the truth of history isn’t conveniently indexed in single-source textbooks. She has found it imperative to examine a variety of information, weigh out the evidence, no matter how unconventional, then draw or finalize her own conclusion.

She likens the art of researching to a complex jigsaw puzzle minus having the picture on the front of the box in advance.

In this topic, Monica will speak on the following talking points:

1. A recap of the Negroes’ history as taught in the Western school system.
2. Going beyond the textbooks to examine works from a broad and unbiased source of information.
3. Comparing the history taught in the Western school system with ancient writings, scholastic sources, and content from past and present authors.

Born into the New World Order

“A world where the rule of law, not the law of the jungle, governs the conduct of nations”...George H.W. Bush addressing a joint session of Congress, 1990

We’ve all heard the term “new world order,” first espoused by Woodrow Wilson, followed by Winston Churchill, and former president, George H.W. Bush, just to name a few. The term even hit the international circuit. The former Russian leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, has been known to spout it a time or two.

Currently, the term has caught momentum within the religious and conspiracy communities.

However, according to Wikipedia, the term was used to refer to any new period of history evidencing a dramatic change in the world’s political thought and the balance of power.

Monica, in agreement with wiki’s definition, will speak on the following talking points:

1. The regime change that changed everything; from the world’s political thought, nations’ identities, and the balance of power.
2. Examine George H.W. Bush’s concept of the term New World Order, when he addressed a joint session of Congress in 1990.
